Allowable Subject Matter

1. The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter: the prior art does not disclose or fairly suggest selecting the first and second transmission parameters from a group consisting of a factor indicating output power, channel coding rate, number of consecutive packets, and frequency of broadcasting the number of consecutive packets. Instead, the prior art suggests transmitting the context control information using any transmission parameter that will result in the probability of delivery associated with the context control information exceeding the probability of delivery associated with the transmission parameter used to transmit the payload of the packet. In the prior art, transmission parameters which can increase the probability of delivery are not limited to the group of four transmission parameters listed in the claim.
